"IN A SEARCH FOR A POSITIVE FUTURE"

In the Soviet Union January 19 - February 2, 1986

In January 1986, citizens from the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. will meet to share their vision of a positive future:

- What will it be like when the world works for everyone?
- What is the Communist dream that has not yet been fulfilled?
- What is the American hope of a "New Order of the Ages?"
- What might the Soviet and American people be able to create together?

In January of 1986, we will, as Citizen Diplomats, meet and dialogue with Soviet officials, educators, psychologists, economists, foreign relations specialists, scientists, journalists, theologians and healers to probe for common ground and openly explore our differences in our joint quest for peace.

As we dialogue with Soviet citizens on their vision of the future, we will have the opportunity to overcome fears and misconceptions we may hold of one another. Through personal communication we can both reassess our concepts and beliefs thereby increasing trust and mutual understanding. Through this understanding, the people of both our nations can recognize our common humanity and together make a contribution towards global peace.

"We seek those who are ready to be Social Olympians practicing their full potential. Nothing less than our best will do at this time in history. It is in the hands of the people of the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. to bring peace to this world."

U.S./U.S.S.R. ORIENTATION PROGRAM

Before entering into the Soviet Union, we plan to spend 3 days at a beautiful country manor and health spa on the Baltic Sea. Here, we will join in orientation and training in Soviet history and culture as well as explore psychological and political perspectives of citizen diplomacy.

Building a team, a resonating core, we will learn how to initiate effective dialogue with the Soviets as we engage them in discussions of their vision of the future. Using the resonating core experiences, we will practice holding this state to create an environment where we can openly respond to one another. As we develop our team process of cooperation and communication, the journey will provide an opportunity for an extraordinary training in personal and social evolution.

Each day during the trip, both in Helsinki and the Soviet Union, we will meet in resonating cores — small groups designed to practice holding our state of resonance and to share at the deeper level. We will also meet as a whole, periodically to align on our goals and support one another.

We will deepen our intuition and imagination in order to ask more profound questions of the Soviets and of ourselves. As we develop the ability to create genuine dialogue, we become the true citizen diplomat, practicing BEING the change we wish to see within the world.
