

BACKGROUND

Formerly known as the Center for Soviet-American Dialogue, over the past seven years the Center has expanded its work to other countries such as Ireland, Costa Rica, Israel, and Ethiopia. The Center was the U.S. sponsor for the first Soviet-American Citizens Summit held in Washington, D.C.- 1988 and the second International Summit held in Moscow-1990. USCID has worked closely with the Republics of Georgia, Armenia, Azerbaijan and the Ukraine. In October 1989 USCID organized the first successful dialogue in Conflict Resolution between Armenians and Azerbaijanis that was later broadcast Nationally in the U.S. and USSR.

As a result of past successes in helping to open doors in the Soviet Union for the Soviet people and over four thousand U.S. citizens and their organizations. The Center has catalyzed 796 joint projects in Health, Education, Ecology, Business and Trade, Economics, Human Rights, Conflict Resolution, Religion, Publications, Film, Media, and the Cultural Arts which are now active between the US and USSR. The work of USCID is said to have contributed to the shift in Soviet-American relations and current changes now taking place within the Soviet Union.

USCID's office in Moscow and Kieve, Ukraine continue to serve as liaison for many on-going projects between citizens of the US and USSR. As a result of this commitment and the efforts of those who have volunteered their time, millions of Americans are now interacting directly through a variety of forums, professional exchanges, joint projects, joint business ventures and citizen diplomacy missions for both adults and youth.
